THE SAN FRANCISCO HORROR.

The blow delivered by fate and the forces of nature to San Francisco may fairly be considered the record breaking calamity of the century. Every hour brings news of increasing disaster and it is now a settled fact that the proudest city of the Pacific Coast is a leveled waste of ruin.

The earthquake in three minutes laid low that portion of the city between Montgomery Street and the city front, the portion known as "made land."

The shock, which seems to have been felt all over the continent, showed the fiercest activity on the peninsula of San Francisco.

Fires naturally broke out with the crossing of a tangled mass of electric wires and the shock having parted the water mains, the Fire Department found it impossible to cope with the additional dangers and dynamite was resorted to in the last extremity to stay the progress of the flames.

These methods proved insufficient and after long struggle with a hundred fires the Department retired from the unequal contest and yesterday the Mayor issued a proclamation to the citizens to the effect that further attempts to master the flames was useless and asked that all who were capable should seek safety outside the doomed city. It was a repetition of the last disparaging cry that went over the battle field of Waterloo. "Save himself who can."

All day there was a rush for the boats which were packed with human freight and they went out while the loftiest buildings in the city were tumbling in ruin.

The survivors of the calamity who have reached Carson say that to give the remotest idea of the scenes witnessed on the morning of the earthquake would reach beyond the limits of human language.

The excitement, the rapid disintegration of the business and residence part of the town and the universal desolation and confusion is a picture to be stamped on the human memory for a lifetime.

People away from this scene of misery and despair gather no idea of the universal panic which seized the inhabitants of the crumbling city. It recalled the scenes when Lisbon was obliterated and when Vesuvius overwhelmed Herculaneum.

The calamity has taught San Francisco that it cannot trust business blocks on "made ground." It also shows that buildings can be constructed that will withstand earthquake shocks. The Call building, the tallest in the city was sufficiently well constructed to stand the shock. San Francisco is geographically situated where it commands the trade of the Pacific and has the finest harbor in the world and it will be rebuilt.

Dance Postponed

The Eagles have postponed their dance on account of the terrible catastrophe in San Francisco.

People You Like to Meet.

Are found on the through trains of the Santa Fe Route. First class travel is attracted to first class roads. The Santa Fe Route is a first-class road.

It is one of the three largest railway systems in the world. Present mileage, 7,734 miles.

It extends from Lake Michigan to the Pacific Ocean and Gulf of Mexico, reaching with its own rails Chicago, Kansas City, Denver, Fort Worth, Galveston, El Paso, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

It runs the finest and fastest transcontinental train, the California Limited.

Its meal service, managed by Mr. F. H. Harvey, is the best in the world. Its track is rock ballasted and throughout with heavy steel rails.

On such a road as this long distance records are frequently shattered, the latest being that of the "Scotty Special" Los Angeles to Chicago, 2,200 miles in less than 45 hours.

Every comfort and luxury desired by modern travelers.

May we sell you a ticket over the Santa Fe.
